Outcome:

1. Livelihoods of poor, socially excluded and vulnerable women and men are more resilient to climate shocks and stresses, with stronger access to, and control over land and water resources.
2. Women smallholders, and their organisations, have greater influence in local markets, increase their income, have access to finance and are negotiating with local government budgets, programmes and services for small holders.
- 3 Government and private sector increasingly develop and implement pro poor policies, programmes and practices that strengthen food security, land rights and climate resilience
- 4 High-risk communities, both urban and rural, have reduced their disaster risks and become more resilient to the effects of natural disasters and climate related shocks.
- 5The Government of Nepal mainstreams DRR into policies, plans and budget and implements local disaster risk reduction planning guidelines.
- 6 Government, civil society and private sector are able to deliver effective, accountable, gender sensitive humanitarian assistance, in accordance with international standards.
- 7 Reduce the prevalence of gender-based violence, and the threat of such violence, by changing deep-seated norms and attitudes in Nepali Society that perpetuate violence against women.
- 8 Enable women, especially from marginalised communities, to participate equally in politics and governance through addressing social barriers.
- 9 Create a positive legal and policy environment for gender equality and women's rights
- 10 Enable cross-sector networks and platforms to grow women's leadership at different levels, amplify their voice, and leverage their collective strength for transformative change.

Impact:

Impact 1: Improved food security and livelihoods status of poor, socially excluded and vulnerable women and men

Impact 2: Saving lives now and in the future with enhanced resilience for vulnerable women and men at risk of, or coping with, disasters.

Impact 3: Women enjoy equal rights and are valued and acknowledged as decision makers at all levels
